Dear Friends of Community Action:

Another year has passed and Community Action Agencies in Utah have continued to work tirelessly to help the people in our State who suffer from the effects of poverty.

We see a faint of hope that our economy is beginning to get better. This means that employment opportunities will not be as scarce as they have been for several years. We collectively believe that decent paying employment, along with education are the two strongest pathways to breaking the cycle of poverty.

Every county in Utah is served by a Community Action Agency. Each of these agencies is as unique as the community they serve. This is one of the greatest aspects of a Community Action Agency. Each area of the State decides what kind of activities they want in their own community that will be most beneficial for the low-income population.

I hope that you will review this report and see for yourself the many opportunities your local Community Action Agency has to offer for our very diverse communities throughout the State. Together with our many difference funding sources, our local arms of government, our terrific volunteers and Board members, we can continue to help those who need emergency help, advocacy, encouragement, and most of all, a non-bureaucratic system to help them break the cycle of poverty.

With warm regards,

Cathy Caputo Hoskins, CCAP
Board President
At Community Action Partnership of Utah we envision a Utah where economic access and opportunity are equal, where all Utahans can achieve economic security.

A big part of meeting this vision is the Community Action Agency network in Utah.

In Utah there are 9 Community Action Agencies, each involved, each committed and each working harder every year to respond to the needs of Utah’s low-moderate income communities. Community Action Agencies are uniquely positioned to respond to these needs and strive to engage all parts of the community in that response.

Utah’s Community Action Agencies are often the first line of help for a family in crisis. Our member agencies hear the stories, see the faces and hold the hands of thousands of Utahns who need help. The diverse services offered by Community Action Agencies range from rental and utility assistance, to emergency food to crisis nurseries.

Community action has a promise, a promise that is shared by every CAP agency across the country. Community Action changes people’s lives, embodies the spirit of hope, improves communities, and makes America a better place to live. We care about the entire community, and we are dedicated to helping people help themselves and each other.

Community action truly aims to live up to this promise and we thank you for helping us to do that. The strength of this program comes through true collaboration, thank you for being a part of that and we look forward to a Utah were that vision of economy security for all is realized

Poverty in Utah is real. It doesn’t have to be.

Sincerely,

Paul Leggett

What is Community Action?

Community Action Agencies (CAA’s) are non-profit private and public organizations established under the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964 to fight America’s War on Poverty.

Community Action Agencies help people to help themselves in achieving self-sufficiency. There are over 1,000 Community Action Agencies nationwide serving 96% of the nation’s counties; some are part of local governments, while others are private non-profit organizations. Although each is unique, they all continue to work toward that initial goal set over 40 years ago. Because each community is unique, the approach each Community Action agency takes to fight poverty is also unique.

In Utah there are nine Community Action Agencies and one statewide partner. All Community Action Agencies are members of the statewide Community Action Partnership of Utah (CAP Utah). These agencies work collectively to provide families with the support and resources they need to obtain self-sufficiency. Our goal is to help people change their lives. We do this through direct services, advocacy, education and community collaborations.

On the following pages, you will find a description, and report, of each of these agencies and what they do to change the lives and improve the circumstances of the people in their own community.

Community Services Block Grant

The Community Services Block Grant (CSBG) is the core of Community Action. CSBG is a federal, anti-poverty block grant that funds the operations of the Community Action network. CSBG provides the base funding that Community Action Agencies use to improve conditions and deliver direct services to people struggling to achieve self-sufficiency.

CSBG is unique among federal programs in that it is the only comprehensive investment exclusively focused on reducing poverty. Other federal programs address specific challenges or factors involved in poverty but they take a piecemeal approach. CSBG effectively uses a mix of federal, state, and local resources to address the problems that lead to systemic poverty. Using CSBG as their core funding, Community Action Agencies leverage other public and private resources to weave a network of support for families and communities.

CSBG funds result in innovative programs that address the leading causes of poverty, such as lack of affordable housing, inadequate access to health care, and too few job opportunities. CSBG helps low-income Americans obtain employment, increase their educational level, access vital early childhood programs, and maintain their independence.

Community representation and accountability are hallmarks of the CSBG network, where a tri-partite board governs agencies. This board structure consists of elected public officials, representatives of the low-income community, and appointed leaders from the private sector.

In 2011, CSBG agencies provided services to 18.7 million low-income individuals in 7.6 million families. Out of the 47 million Americans in poverty, the CSBG Network served 22% nationally.
Poverty in Utah:

- 13.5% of Utahns lived below the poverty level in 2011, compared to the national poverty rate of 15.5%.

- 374,859 people lived in poverty in 2011, which was 12,170 more than in 2010.

- Utah’s average unemployment rate in 2011 was 6.2%.

- Utah had the 14th-lowest poverty rate in the nation in 2011. Alabama had the highest (22.6%), and New Hampshire had the lowest (8.8%).

- Nearly 40% of female-headed households lived in poverty in 2011.

Community Action in Utah:

- 9 agencies in 100% of Utah counties.

- 86% of Utah families served were in poverty, and 52% of Utah families served were in severe poverty.

- Utah’s Community Action network provided services to 230,951 low-income individuals in 78,629 families.

- Of those served, 84,828 were children, 115,167 were people with disabilities and 14,882 were seniors.

- For every $1 of CSBG funding, the Utah Community Action network leveraged $6.23 from state, local, and private sources, including the value of volunteer hours ($0.30 state, $0.16 local, $5.03 private, and $0.75 value of volunteer hours).

- $3,428,129 CSBG dollars supported the core activities of the Utah Community Action network.

In 2011 the Utah Community Action network addressed 869,540 conditions of poverty that create barriers to economic security.
Poverty in Utah is real. It doesn't have to be.
Mission: The Bear River Association of Governments (BRAG) is a voluntary organization of local governments that facilitates the coordination of federal, state and local programs for the solution of mutual problems in Box Elder, Rich, and Cache Counties. BRAG provides a wide variety of services and manages multiple programs that focus on finding long-term solutions for many issues in the region, including poverty.
